Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

It begins to dawn on many of us, who perceive in Federal control of motor vehicles, tires, tubes, and, perhaps, gasoline, soon that we may have to revert to those days when everybody was afoot or ahorseback. Of course there were in those days vehicles clumsy contraptions, with high iron shod wheels over which women and old folks climbed painfully to the wagon or buggy seat. But such vehicles are nowadays few and far between. Many of them are jealously guarded relics in museums and others are disintegrating in gullies, farm yards or rubbish dumps. So we may, indeed, presently find ourselves afoot or ahorseback.

In those old days in the early Nineties in the farm corral switching flies or browsing in the feed racks, there were Blanche, Snooks, Sadie, Black Prince, Bonnie and a half dozen other horse kind each with a very personal individuality for the two youngsters who saddled a couple of them and rode away to high school in Santa Barbara, a matter of three miles and a good half hours ride. One morning it might be Blanche and Snooks, two Indian ponies, one, a bay with white stockings and face, the other, her daughter Snooks, a slate grey with the same white markings. They were reluctant, fat and lazy beasts at best, degenerate daughters of the Arabs that Cortez and his men rode into the New World.

High spot on the way to the school would be to overtake Judge Walter Cope out for a morning gallop on his big Arab gelding, one of the Den ranch horses. The Dens were an English-Spanish family who chose the best of the breeding stock in the country round and brought back to something like classic Arab lines the riding horses of the county. Judge Walter Cope had been elected on the Democratic ticket in a Republican county, and though the two lads from a Republican family were a little distrustful, they did admire his mastery of his mount and the horse's fine furnishings. In the torch light procession staged on election eve, the Democrats had a slogan, that fairly bowled over the opposition. It was: "Our Walter Can Cope With Anybody." The voters liked the slogan, and they liked young Cope (he was under thirty) and they turned a fusty old Republican out of office, much to the latter's indignant surprise. The incumbent had never spent a penny, he boasted, in getting himself re-elected, and he vowed and he vummed he wouldn't. So after thirty years or such a matter the voters ousted him.

Judge Cope's horse was a strawberry roan with white splashes and splotches. His saddle was of stamped Mexican leather modestly adorned in bright silver and his bridle was of woven white horsehair. The judge wore no spurs, because, he said, when boys asked him, the horse was too full of tricks as was. The county he said, wanted a live judge, not a dead one. Nor did he carry a quirt. But the boys discovered to their great satisfaction that when they put their nags to the rapid Spanish walk to which they trained, as were all cow ponies, the judge's big pinto had to break into a single foot to keep pace with them.

The judge had a way with him and the two boys came to like him immensely, dispite that little distrust that all sound Republicans have for a Democrat. As they rode along they found he knew more than they did about saddles and horses, about guns and game, about roadrunners, about ground squirrels and cotton tail rabbits, about bird's nests and eggs, in fact he knew a lot about everything the two farm lads were interested in. They marveled considerably, because in their minds they had put him down for a city fellow with a formidable knowledge of law, of course, and diplomas, no end, from college and universities, but without much savvy of things rural and fundamental.

On these morning jaunts with the judge, he used to tell great tales of the big school in Berkeley, where boys and girls went for four years more of schooling after graduating from high school. It then leaked out casually as it were, that he was the son of a rancher in San Luis Opispo County, and the boys gathered that his father set no store by high falutin' education that cost scads of money, and incapacitated a lot of strong young fellows from ever doing any hard work. At that point, feeling that they knew him well, one of the boys asked the judge how much he was making. They heard with astonishment that the county paid him $3,000 a year just for judging. They couldn't visualize that much in silver or gold but they could convert the sum into cattle, or hogs or dairy cows, and when they saw how big the herd would be, their eyes bugged out. And what did his father think now, they asked breathlessly. Well, the judge spoke sadly, his father had not lived to see this day. He died of hard work on his ranch, or words to that effect, and the judge himself was now devoting part of his fine salary to paying off a mortgage on the ranch, so that his mother, who wouldn't move off it, could have a home.

Of course they could have done that three miles to school in less than half an hour. In fact on Black Prince with the older boy in the saddle, once did the distance in 14 minutes flat. But there was no need of so much speed in those days. In those slower times there was leisure for thinking, and often for lusty singing. The judge had a great barytone voice and liked to sing. There was time for long interesting conversations about everything under the sun. As the judge rode along on his big pinto he was planting seeds in two young minds, seeds from a mind that understood a lot about the younger minds. That is why he was such a good judge and sat on the bench of the Santa Barbara Superior Court for a great many years.

Well, if our cars run out of gas, or tires or tubes in the present war emergency, we may have to return to that more leisurely method of locomotion, either that or resort to legs that have nearly forgotten how to walk. If we do, let us remember how pleasant it was in those days, just to step into a saddle and amble along a county road with never a thought of whip or spur unless, indeed, one was going for the doctor. If it should come to such a pass, it is just possible that we shall hear again that invocation, that used to be uttered so scornfully when the first horseless carriages appeared: "Get a horse!"

Council Authorizes Purchase Of Identification Arm Bands For City Air Raid Wardens

Civilian defense occupied practically all of the time of the city council here Thursday night. Councilmen Frank Davies and Dr. John R. Ivey were not present at the meeting because of illness.

It was the first regular meeting of the council since the war began and the local trustees lost no time in:

1 Authorizing the purchase of seven dozen identifying arm bands for Nevada City air raid wardens.

2 Calling a special meeting of the city defense council for tonight at the City Hall.

3 Authorizing the use of city trucks for use by Chief of Police Max Solaro and the local volunteer fire department in distributing sand for combatting fires and bombs, to residents of the city.

4 Authorized the attendance of local police officers and Air Raid Warden Al Bates at an FBI war instruction school in Sacramento on January 16th.

5 Adopted an ordinance creating the Nevada City Defense Council and a blackout ordinance. (Both are printed in this issue.)

C. K. Heffren, coordinator for the Nevada County Defense Council, was present at the council meeting. He informed the council it was his duty to assist in the operation of defense groups in the county and gave suggestions for organization, etc.

The councilmen thanked Heffren for his information and said his suggestions will be followed when the defense group meets Monday night to organize.

Heffren told the council here that it is hoped by the Nevada County Defense Council that all of western end of this county will be coordinated regarding an air raid warning. He said the communities of Grass Valley and Nevada City are satisfactorily working out blackout plans but so far no plan has been devised to blackout the outlying districts, inasmuch as the signals used in the

Murchie Operation Suspended

WORK AVAILABLE FOR MINE EMPLOYEES IN SISKIYOU

The Empire-Star Mines, Ltd., has closed the Murchie Mine and the salvaging of all useful materials is now going on.

It was announced that work will be available for Murchie Mine employees at the Empire-Star Company's recently acquired Gray Eagle Mine in Siskiyou County.

The end of the Murchie had been expected at any time. The Empire-Star Company had spent approximately $200,000 in the past couple of years in development work without appreciable results. The development work included a 6,000 foot crosscut towards Banner Mountain.

The Murchie several years ago employed 300 men and was one of the leading gold producers of Nevada County, banner gold producing county of the state.

It is expected the salvaging will require about two weeks before the mine is completely abandoned.

The shutdown of the Murchie has not effected operations at the Zeibright in Bear Valley, where normal development work, carried on since the tailings dam was washed out two years ago, is continuing.

Work at the Zeibright includes driving a tunnel from the Yuba River on the west to the Zeibright workings. Eventually, the tunnel will probably be used as a method for disposing of the tailings from the Zeibright mill.

At the Murchie employment has been between 30 and 40 men for the past year.

Air Raid Wardens Hold Instructional Meeting

A general group meeting of all Nevada City air raid wardens was held Friday night in the city hall. Chief Air Raid Warden Al Bates presided. He announced Charles Everhart would be secretary of the group.

The purpose of the meeting was to acquaint the wardens with their duties and to explain what action they should take when the city is confronted with an air raid.

The city has been divided into four sections. The area captains are:

District 1—A. W. Willard; District 2—Dave Richards; District 3—U. S. N. Johnson and District 4—Leland S. Smith.

Bates told the air raid wardens that it is planned to have six alarms located through Nevada City, all connected with one circuit and controlled by a central switch, but said it will be quite a while before that system is installed. In the meanwhile the air raid warnings will be by available whistles and bells in the city.

The air raid signal until further notice will be:

Three blasts at short intervals, three times.

All clear signal:

Two blasts, three times.

SPEAKERS TO TELL OF MEASURES FOR COUNTY DEFENSE

A speakers bureau has been set up in the County Defense Council to provide speakers for any groups in the cities and rural areas. Service clubs, lodges, farm centers, school groups, church gatherings are asked to take advantage of this service in order that the public might become better informed on defense matters.

A number of the police officers of Nevada City and Grass Valley, as well as county officers have attended a number of schools conducted by the FBI, and they gained considerable information which should be known by the citizens of the county in case of a local bombing or other emergency. Speakers from this group are available through the speakers bureau.

Speakers are available from the district attorney's office, sheriff's office and also from the schools. Speakers also will be provided to give information on Defense Stamps and Bonds, in cooperation with the local stamp sales committees.

Any one wishing to avail themselves of this speakers service should contact, Eben K. Smart, Public Information Chairman, or the members of his committee; Robert T. Ingram, Grass Valley; H. M. Leete, Nevada City; Douglas Barrett, Truckee; Elmer Stevens, Grass Valley.

The Nevada County Defense Council has confirmed the appointment of C. K. Heffren, as defense coordinator. Mr. Heffren had been acting under appointment by Chairman Vernon Stoll in the preliminary work of the council. He will now work in his capacity as coordinator on a full time basis until such time as the emergency is lifted.

Heffren, who had already been active on a voluntary basis in the defense work, will assist the City Defense Councils as well as the county organization. In making the appointment, Mr. Stoll stated that it was the desire of the council to unite the entire county under one plan of action, having in mind the prevention of duplication by the various units; and the promoting of cooperation of all concerned.

The organization set up of the County Council, the Grass Valley, Nevada City and Truckee Councils will remain the same. The various councils will be free to call on Mr. Heffren to assist them in any of their problems which can not be solved by volunteer workers only.

Here For Meetings—

District Rangers Frank Delaney of Downieville, Pete Land of Sierraville, H. I. Snider of Truckee, Charles Beardsley of Forest Hill and John R. Hodgson of Big Bend are in Nevada City to attend the Tahoe National Forest staff meeting.

Eight Year Old Boy Blamed For Turning In False Fire Alarm

An eight year old boy is blamed with turning in a false fire alarm last night which caused a rush of fire fighting equipment and firemen to Box 24, in front of the Harris Drug Store.

The fire box has no glass covering the key and either the temptation was too much for the boy or he did not realige what he was doing.

Anyway, under questioning by firemen, the boy said he did not even know it was a fire alarm box and was dumbfounded when he saw the fire engines and firemen rushing toward where he was standing beside the fire box.

Chief of Police Max Solaro contemplates no action against the boy.

Christensen, Cole Homes Are Broken Into

Burglars Friday night broke into the homes of Mrs. Alma Cole Sheldon and Mr. and Mrs. Pelly Christensen. Unable to find money, the house breakers left empty handed.

Chief of Police Max Solaro is investigating and hopes to stop the local home burglary practice. Just a week ago the Horace Curnow home was broken into and an amount of cash was obtained.

Chief Solaro said apparently the burglars are 'teen age boys whose only desire is to obtain money. The chief of police said it is the practice of the culprits to invade homes where they know the occupants are absent.

They ring the doorbell and if no one answers they try each window to determine if any are unlocked. It has been their practice to cut the window screen and open the unlatched window and gain entrance to the homes that way.

The chief of police is advising all local residents to keep their windows locked to prevent the entrance of burglars.

RED CROSS SAVES TORPEDO VICTIMS

Two coastal Red Cross chapters saw front line action Christmas week even as emergency messages were being sent to all chapters by A. L. Schafer, Pacific area manager.

Alert Red Crossers at San Luis and Eureka on the California coast needed no reminders as enemy submarines attacked 10 U. S. ships in coastal water, sinking four. On the morning of December 23 the tanker Montebello was shelled to the bottom. The crew took to lifeboats. On shore at the little settlement of Cambria Pines, the Red Cross took over a lodge, rushed in blankets, cots and warm food. The first aid team, assisted by members of the Army medical corps, assisted the boats through foaming surf. When one boat overturned, hurling the tired men into the water and nearly drowning them, they were rescued, treated for cuts, bruises and exposure. All were saved.

Dr. John R. Ransom, chairman of the San Luis Obispo Chapter, who witnessed the rescue, praised the work of First Aiders Mrs. Gay Shamel, Miss Leona Schultz, J. Freebody and A. M. Waltz. The latter two plunged into the surf to rescue the seamen.

Off Eureka the same day survivors from the tanker Emidio were brought ashore. Five were killed when their ship was shelled and torpedoed, but 31 persons, several seriously wounded, were landed by a naval rescue ship. Food and clothing were not needed, officers informed Mrs. Clara Duncan, Red Cross executive secretary, but an offer to telegraph the relatives of the men was heartily accepted. Thus first official news of the rescue reached the survivers' families through the Humboldt County Chapter, American Red Cross.

These Red Cross chapters had accepted their traditional role before they received Area Manager Schafer's message, which read: "We must be prepared for any eventnality. We are duty bound to give emergency relief to survivors of any and all ships which may be attacked. This is a traditional part of Red Cross service."

REGISTRATION FEB. 16 WILL BE EXPEDITED

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 12. — California men, subject to Selective Service sign-up February 16, 1942 as potential selectee-soldiers in the armed forces of the nation, can look forward to a speedy registration and classification.

Brig. Gen. Joseph O. Donovan, state director of selective service, also announced that local boards throughout the state are being geared for unprecedented acceleration in all all-out effort to meet the exigencies created by war and the demands by the War Department for more and more men.

Chairmen of the 284 local boards in California, for the past month preparing for the setting up of additional registration places in large remote or inaccessible areas, are presently being called upon to have this work completed not later than January 15, with designations of needed additional registration board.

It is estimated that in addition to the permanently established 284 local boards, there will be between 1,500 and 2,000 temporary boards located throughout the state where registration will be taken. The state director said these temporary boards are being established for the two-fold purpose of attaining top speed in registration and to prevent unnecessary hardship to the registrant residing long distances from established boards.

Closely patterning additional boards along the lines adopted in California last R-Day, July 1, 1941 when in excess of 700 such boards reduced registration time, temporary boards will be conducted by volunteer workers from business and professional life. Chairmen of permanent boards will have supervision of temporary boards allocated in their respective areas.

Chairman Cary Arbogast of the board of supervisors and County Clerk R. N. McCormack were visitors in Sacramento Friday.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder at the scowling baby year,
He's going to be a problem child I fear;
He seems adverse to joy and care free frolic,
He suffers too, with fever, mumps and colic.
He's bellicose and super-naturally austere
A dour and unpredictable New Year.
Still, he will make the grade if we'll combine
To dose him well with Victory vitamine.

I wonder at the speed and efficiency with which the tragedy of Pearl Harbor clarified the national vision and enabled many of us, for the first time, to see things as they really are. The New Year came in frowning, but he found us awake.

We should have awakened long ago, but there were the sirens, they sang such comforting songs. We listened and were unduly lulled. Now, we know that our oceans are not impassable barriers, that Hitler is interested in America, that, it can happen here, that we cannot live in a Nazi dominated world, and knowing these things, we cease our wishful thinking, and press on with grim determination to meet whatever the future has in store for our embattled nation.

We know that our forces are powerful, that our foes are unscrupulous and utterly vile; but we are not afraid. With faith in our leadership and in our own might, we shall support the armed forces of a great country, and our motto is "full speed ahead," That is the slogan for every American to make his own, whether he be great or small.

I hope that we shall keep our sense of humor through all the grim days ahead, and that we may even at this time, discern signs of Hitler's waning powers.

The sirens told us that he was invincible, but that is not true. Hitler springing up in a noisome cellar, like a noxious mushroom of the first magnitude,—Hitler parading through conquered territory, with daisy chains about his neck and heiling throngs, crowding the line of march, was a rather imposing personage; but Hitler fearing for his life, hiding in Berchtesgaden, speaking to his dear people behind bullet proof glass and driving about in bullet proof glass show cases, was a ridiculous figure of a man, and when a great, strong man becomes rediculous,—oh, "what a fall is there my countrymen!"

Mussolini and Schickelgruber celebrating their unholy conquests, meeting in sacred box cars, and a' that, caused us to stare wide eyed but Hitler and Il Dupe, fleeing across the desert sands, like Paul and Virginia escaping from the storm, that is quite another thing, now isn't it?

A great Jap war lord planning an attack upon peaceful Pearl Harbor, enraged us and turned our thoughts to both offensive and defensive action, but this same war lord toddling away to tell the Sun Goddess—"bloomin' idol made of mud," that his plans are proceeding as per schedue—that provides occupation for the cartoonist.

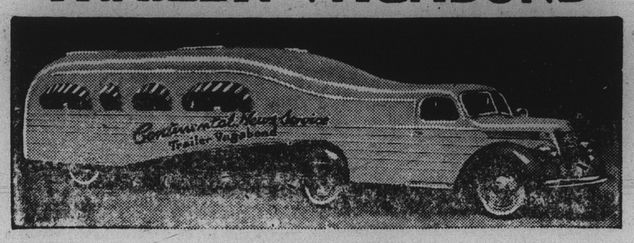

No, these men are not super-men, they are simply gangsters, terrible enough for a time, but now, having become marks for our ridicule are surely on the road to ignominious defeat.

Uncle Silas says; "That was a very good name President Roosevelt choose from Mussolini and the war lords of Japan, for "chess men" are usually made of ivory—from the head down." A. Merriam Conner.

THE WAVE WILL RISE

TRAILER VAGABOND

By WARREN BAYLEY

This feature appears through the courtesy of O. K. Tire Weld Co. G. R. (Red) Jarrard, Hills Flat, Grass Valley, California.

Long Beach, California.

If you happen out this way soon and miss seeing your favorite hot-dog stand, look again, closely. It might be hiding under a coat of camouflage. That air of obscurity is going to be practiced a lot around here in weeks to come, although it will first take care of places more important than dispensers of America's favorite sandwich.

One large area in particular should and will be attended to soon—the rich oil fields of Signal Hill, rising behind this city. The vast forest of oil derricks covering these rounded brown slopes is no secret to the Japs, so we're not giving their location away. These gaunt towers that for years have been drawing the earth's black gold from the depths have been photographed by every possible enemy of the U. S. A. So have the many huge oil storage tanks that dot the landscape around here.

It would be foolish to try to kid the enemy that the derricks and the tanks aren't here any more—by camouflaging them to resemble a forest or village or some other tricky masquerade. With the aid of modern instruments a bomber knows exactly when he has arrived over a given area, and he can tell, even from ten thousand feet, if the ground elevation below has been altered as little as twenty four inches. If he looks down and discovers a suddenly sprouted forest where his photographs indicate a tank farm has thrived he will instantly realize that all he has to do is bomb the daylights out of that forest and he'll hit the jack-pot.

The experts tell me that this tricky, "dummy' camouflage is more valuable when used to confuse an enemy on landmarks, although it will protect newer structures and mobile objects. Objectives that have been in one place for some time will just have to sit there and take it.

But you can make those objectives hard to see and hit. While admitting they are still there you can confuse the bomber's aim. He has but seven seconds in which to lay his sights after he is in position to lay his eggs. That isn't much time. If an oil tank for example, has been painted in flowing bands and blobs to dim its outline and harmonize with surroundings, it is going to become a difficult target from any but dangerously low altitudes.

Those oil tanks, incidentally, are very difficult to hide. They cast very distinctive shadows—rounded ones that instantly give them away for what they are. If anyone ever invents a means of eliminating shadows he'll become a billionaire. Tank shadows can be hidden if surrounding areas, as well as the tanks themselves, are painted a dull black.

The greatest difficulty of camouflage with paint is that it has always shown up in infra-red photographs. An objective's roof, painted over to resemble the tree tops of a surrounding forest, may convince the eye but it can't fool the film. But right here we can pause a moment and rejoice. Our experts have recently invented a means of making such camouflage stand up against such photography without disclosing its real identity. The method is a military secret.

Good camouflage seems to be a matter of a little artistic ability and a whole lot of common sense. There is plenty of both around here, so this area is bound to become well protected from possible bombing attacks.

LEGAL NOTICE

(NOTE: NOT ALL OF THE ABOVE COMMITTEES WILL BE APPLICABLE IN ALL CITIES, PARTICULARLY COMMITTESS (6) AND (7). IN MOST CITIES IN METROPOLITAN AREAS THERE WILL BE NO NEED FOR A COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES (6) AND ONLY A FEW CITIES IN THE STATE HAVE SUFFICIENT INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES TO JUSTIFY A COMMITTEE ON INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES (7) AT THIS TIME. IT SHOULD BE NOTED, HOWEVER, THAT THE COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES INCLUDES THE PROCESSING AND PACKING OF FOODS. THE COMMITTEE WOULD THEREFORE BE APPLICABLE IN MANY POPULATION CENTERS IN RURAL COUNTIES. FOR A FURTHER EXPLANATION OF THESE POINTS SEE THE ATTACHED MEMORANDUM.)

The City Council by resolution shall create such other permanent and such temporary committees of the Defense Council as the City Council deems necessary, shall define their duties within the purpose of this ordinance and may abolish any such committee. The chairman of the permanent committees of the Defense Council shall be designated by the Defense Council Chairman from among the members of the Defense Council appointed as provided in Section 2 of this ordinance. Members of permanent committees other than the chairman and all members of temporary committees shall be appointed by the chairman of the Defense Council and need not be members of the Defense Council.

Section 6. This ordinance is hereby declared to be an emergency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety and shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication as required by law. The following is a specific statement showing the urgency of this ordinance:

An emergency exists in the United States and in this State in providing adequate National and Local Defense. It is necessary that all information be gathered relating to National Defense and to provide for the proper cooperation and coordination of public and private agencies so that adequate Local Defense may be provided for at as early a date as possible.

Adopted this 8th day of January, 1942.

BENJ. HALL, Mayor.
Attest: (City Clerk) GEO. H. CALANAN.
